The Filters feature allows you to use filters to alter the way images look. Filters are used to create special effects by altering colors or adding and removing visual elements, such as blurring, lighting, and color. The Layers feature allows you to add images and color overlays to create compositions. You can then add more layers and use the Triggers feature to add movement to layers.

Q: HTML5 "No embeddable elements allowed" when adding html to a rails view I just added some HTML (not in the view, but inline) to a view in a Rails application that worked before, and now for some reason I get "No embeddable elements allowed" on the page rendered by rails. Here's a simple example: Hello This is some text The browser complains on the second line, but not the first. I have nokogiri and thin installed, just like I had before, and I'm using Edge browser on Win10 (so I don't think the problem is browser-specific). Here's a link to a fiddle showing the problem. If I comment out the second line, it works. I also tried adding something like this, but that doesn't work either: Any ideas what's going on? A: Another format of the 2nd line is right. Test Hello This is some text When your code can do that it can work well even in the edge browser. PROKOPONG (SB&W) &amp;amp;amp;amp;amp;amp;amp;amp;amp;

Practice Approaches to Vaccination Against Listeriosis in Turkey: A Mixed-Methods Study. Listeriosis is a foodborne pathogen with a high mortality rate. There are limited data about current practices to control listeriosis in Turkey. The aim of this study was to investigate the awareness and practices of public health professionals regarding listeriosis. Using a mixed-methods design, data were collected using a questionnaire and a focus group discussion between August 2017 and May 2018. The questionnaire used closed-ended and open-ended questions for responses. Data analysis was performed using descriptive statistics. In the focus group discussion, themes were established and coding for emerging themes and subthemes was done. A total of 500 questionnaires were sent to 206 participants in the study. Of these, 154 participants (78.1%) responded. The most commonly used methods to control L. monocytogenes in ready-to-eat food were good hygiene practices and proper time limit for refrigeration. Most participants did not use equipment and supplies to control L. monocytogenes in ready-to-eat food. The reason for no use was lack of equipment and supplies. Lack of awareness among the public, insufficiency of legal regulations and lack of educational programs were the most important barriers for practices to control L. monocytogenes. In Turkey, there are still insufficient regulations for listeriosis. There is a need for more awareness and education about listeriosis. In a country with no animal-based products, there is a lack of practices to control L. monocytogenes in ready-to-eat food. There is no legal regulation for controlling L. monocytogenes in ready-to-eat food in Turkey.
