Percutaneous aortic stent graft insertion has become an increasingly widespread technique. The risk of malposition or deployment failures is an ever-present problem. The authors report the early clinical results and short-term follow-up data with skeletal stent graft placement for native and endovascular graft-related aortic disease. Thirty-four stent grafts were successfully placed in 30 patients, including 18 for aneurysmal disease, 12 for traumatic rupture, and 4 for dissection. Deployment was successful in all patients and 3 of the 34 (8%) procedure-related deaths occurred (1 due to stroke and 2 from procedural rupture). No stent graft migration occurred and deployment was not complicated in any patient. Follow-up at 6 months (range, 1 to 21 months) revealed no migration or other stent graft-related complications. Skeletal stent graft deployment is a technically safe and effective alternative to conventional graft placement. It may be performed successfully in patients who are anatomically unsuitable for standard stent graft deployment. Prospective studies are needed to
