Thank you for using our website, our passion is making.wis.uef.clan.ideachannel description. . .Abandoned arctic villages, frozen seals, a story with a happy ending. Greenland is a primitive, cold, arctic land, deprived of human life, inhabited by Eskimos and the most northerly known human settlements, dating back to the Viking Age. The only settlements are scattered along the coast. There are no villages, no roads and people live in very primitive conditions. The strange, abandoned villages are partly covered by the glaciers and under some of the ice they can be seen. Although the climate is relatively mild compared with the rest of Denmark, it is bitterly cold in the summer. This season a group of Danish photographers spent many days there to find interesting shots. Many of the pictures show people. The people are living in the most primitive conditions, without any electricity, light or transport. They have a very primitive living and subsistence, which has only recently changed. The change has been brought about by international peacekeeping forces and international law, which has gradually put an end to the traditional war tactics and a hunt for food. Abandoned Polar Research Station. Polar Station Tiberius on the Island of Spitsbergen is a research station of the Scandinavian Research Council in the north of Spitsbergen, Norway. It is surrounded by mountains, whose snow, ice and wind provide ideal conditions for navigation and meteorological research. The island of Spitsbergen is one of the finest of the Norwegian glaciers, and includes the middle of the fjords of Nordaustlandet, Svalbard, and Bjorge. Research is conducted with regard to the study of the climate and has been going on since 1914 when the construction of the station started. An exploration was conducted to the eastern side in 1938 and 1939 with the objective of discovering the eastern extremity of Spitsbergen which is under more than 400 km of ice. The expedition also investigated the west side of Spitsbergen. The island was uninhabited, except for a few population of the polar bear. The island is owned by Norway but it was leased to Sweden in 1654. Ownership was not established until 1943. In winter the main island is inaccessible to the outside world. The northern and eastern parts of the main island are under the snow for more than half the year. The weather conditions are very difficult and may reach 30°C and there are strong winds with 6d1f23a050
