I'm developing a system where users will log in via SAML as per usual. But it is possible for a user to access the application's functionality whilst logged in via multiple sessions at the same time. I.e. Multiple users may be logged in at once. How can we prevent this from happening? Does the server authenticate both sessions? Or is there some sort of locking solution? A: The SAML protocol has no restriction on that. You can do that as long as the application can keep up with the data load - you could use a database (with a multi-user-optimized locking scheme, like PostgreSQL's MVCC model) to keep track of active sessions and manage the lock efficiently. The present invention relates to a new and distinct cultivar of Calibrachoa plant botanically known as Calibrachoa sp. and hereinafter referred to by the cultivar name 'USCALI12.' The new cultivar originated in a controlled breeding program in Elburn, Ill. during September 2010. The objective of the breeding program was the development of Calibrachoa cultivars with attractive flower coloration, and good garden performance. The new Calibrachoa cultivar is the result of cross-pollination. The female (seed) parent of the new cultivar is the proprietary Calibrachoa breeding selection coded P35-3397, U.S. Pat. No. 7,724,160, characterized by its white-colored, double, semi-double, medium green-colored flowers, medium green-colored foliage,
